Motor Mat is a new creation and he will not last very long at the speedy rate that he is travelling. He buys a flivver from a mail order concern and after it arrives by parcel post his troubles begin. He starts the thing and then cannot stop it. He rides past the policeman and does a million things that he should not do, and at last the motor gives out. But this does not discourage him, and he gets a little squirrel to be his engine. In order to make the creature go, he hangs a little nut in front of it. To reverse he merely changes the side on which the nut is hanging. The picture ends, however, when he tumbles from a cliff, and that is the end of his tale.

The second half of this film gives some more of the incomparable scenery that Dr. Dorsey has taken for the Universal Program.
